

UNIQUELY THAI

Khun Kamala Sukosol
Owner of The Sukosol Hotel Bangkok

Khun Kamala Sukosol and her children are behind the mission to bring the Sukosol Hotels (formerly the Siam City Hotel), including Siam Bayshore and Siam Bay View in Pattaya, to the world recognition.

Adopting a big-budget approach with a Bt400 million renovation and the re-launch of The Sukosol, the family stresses brand awareness to help maintain a reputation at the forefront of the Bangkok hospitality scene.

With the central goal to provide a distinctively different hotel experience and to capture the true spirit of Sukosol living, the new hotel's lobby is chic, elegant, and luxurious, aiming to integrate global standards with the warmth and flair of Thai hospitality.

The new look compliments the hotel's emphasis on Thai authenticity underscored by cosmopolitan comfort. The spacious, all-white lobby is accented by pops of purple, green, and silver, and includes the newly extended Pathummat restaurant, a grand staircase, shopping arcade, and guest elevators.

The new lobby is also home to a public gallery and Sapphire Bar, which is well appointed with vintage and classic art decorative items reminiscent of the 1920s. Here guests may enjoy signature cocktails, live jazz music, gourmet coffee and tea, select sweet treats, and mouthwatering light meals.

What provides a unique touch is the stunning collection of priceless regional antiques carefully and lovingly collected by the hotel's owner, Kamala Sukosol. They range from Song Dynasty vases to 18th-century Benjarong Thai porcelain. On display are over 200 museum-worthy artifacts that are truly magnificent. All hotel guests and visitors are invited and encouraged to stroll around this permanent display and soak up the history and beauty.
